During the war Mrs. Oils was untiring in her de-votionite the soldiers cause, and her de-derself still more to Boston by her unsel-Little has been talked about the past week but the death of Mrs. Harrison Grey Ois, her funeral at King's Chapel, and now her will, that has thrown society into another spaam of surprise. As no wo-man was better known the country overfish patriotism. Winter and summer, day in and day out, she was at the sanitary rooms in Tremont street, overseeing arti-cles to be sent to the Massachusetts regi-ments, or receiving contributions of money man was better hown the country of and certainly no one better deserved her distinguished noteriety—every fact connected with her has been greedily sought, and all the particulars of her life the last metted with her has been greedily sought, and all the particulars of her life the last few years revived, by the warm eulogies of the press. Early as 1827 she was left a widow with three boys, and those who knew her then say she had great beauty and very litle fortune—a sufficient reason to marry; but with all her many offers—and she had many—Mrs. Otis preferred to keep the name she has since rendered more famous than its original possessor, siter several years' retirement from gay society, she emerged to take part in the great Bunker Hill fair, held at Fancuil itall, the first of many that have since claimed her labor and patronage. Soon afterward she took her three sons abroad to be educated, and while residing in Germany made the first success in her carer. Her wit and conversation of the present of th found sometimes oppressive. She was too independent, too generous for that narrow minded Bostonian, her father-in-law, so when he died he left her a silver wine reer. Her wit and conversational powers drew about her not only her own coun-trymen, but savans and men of distinc-tion in all ranks. Received at court, Mrs. tion in all ranks. Received at court, Mrs. Otts again made warm friends of royalty, and numbered among her admirers the present Emperor of Russia, his wife and sixter-in-law, as well as the mother of Napoleon III. In Paris, in London, wherever she went, her independence and loyalty were strikingly preserved, and, always wearing her American birthight like a crown, stories were told of be taken away," and sent it down to the Tremont House with her compliments. This spicy proceeding soon rang through the town, and gave mortal offense to the right like a crown, stories were told of her always having an American flag draping her apartments, which she never contradicted. A most thorough, American, Mrs. Otls possessed an ardent love for the historical and monarchial associations of the Old World, and during her whole life never swerved from her allegiance to he powers that be. After a varied and eventful lite in Europe, she returned to America, and soon after bought the house had hourt Vernon street, where she has just died. The house stands on the brow of the hill, and is far from a thing of beauty, term in Boston's many singular speciright like a crown, stories were told of ty, even in Boston's many singular spectmens of architecture. It is fashioned atter the Swiss style, with small bow winman, who had once been a friend of Mr. dows, and is of a dark brown color, some ber and extremely ugly outwardly. Inwardly it is one of the pleasantest houses in town. Rather low-studded and simply larnished in its upholstery, it has an oldlarnished in its upholstery in its upholstery in its upholstery in its upholstery in town. Rather low-studied and simply tarnished in its upholstery, it has an old-shloned eloquence and comfort rarely met with now-a-days but the charm is its contents, its rare picture the many values she source of contents of a literime, the gifts conferred by many friends, artirts, poets, and the trophies of foreign courts, that made of "Mount Vernon," as Mrs. Otis always called it, an art museum as well as hospitable abode. Opening out of the little drawing-room on the second floor was the foon of rooms, where these treasures were displayed, crowding every table and coreting the walls. A lovely bust of Marie Antoinotte, given to Mrs. Olis by one of the unfortunate Queen's descendant, stands on the top of a low bookease that is filled with volumes of great value A picture of Shakspeare, supposed by the experts to be an original, and lately bequeathed to Mrs. Otis by Miss Joy, who made important of the collection of pictures. Staart's picture of Washington, copied by his daughter, and one of Newton, have historic interest, and there are many others, family portraits and-real gems of art, besides a fine picture of the late flishop of Massachusetts, to be vivilly remembered by all who have visited the house. For years Mrs. Otis kept her leadership of society, and butfor and enforced economy would have been princely in her enter-ladies who found an hour with a brilliant woman equal to a month of platitudes at other houses, and in the evening, after a delightful little dinner that never numbered more than four or six, the sterner clement of society gathered to be amused and entertained by the gossip culled during the day. 13. Section 249 of the act of June 8, 1872, provides that contracts for the transportation of the mail shall be "awarded to the lowest bidder tendering sufficient guarantees for faithful performance, without other reference to the mode of such transportation than may pe necessary to provide for the due colerity, certainty and security thereof." Under this law bids that propose to transport the mails with "celerity, eerfainty, and security." having been decided to be the only legal bids, are construed as providing, for the entire mail, however large, and whatever may be the mode of conveyance necessary to insure its "celerity, certainty and security," and have the preference over all others, and no others are considered, except for steamhoat routes.

19. A modification of a bid in any essential terms is tantamount to a new bid, and cannot be received, so as to interfere with regular competition. Making a new bid, with guarantee and certificate, is the only way to modify a previous bid.
